

In a restaurant landscape populated with a dizzying array of choices, Chinese Mirch makes a singular statement. Loosely translated in Hindi, Chinese Mirch suggests spicy Chinese food. The simplicity of the name however belies the complexity of this inventive cuisine with a rich heritage.

Centuries old in the Indian subcontinent, this cooking technique infuses Indian herbs and spices into a blend of Cantonese, Hakka and Szechuan style cooking. The result is an explosion of flavor, sometimes bold and fiery, but always a delight to the senses.

In bringing this cuisine to you, we are unwavering in our insistence on the highest quality ingredients and raw products. We are committed to using the freshest, most healthful, minimally processed meats and produce available. Quality is a cornerstone of our success.

The five things you should know about Chinese Mirch

- Our food is made from scratch, so some dishes may take longer than others to prepare.
- Our food is free of MSG and any artificial additives or preservatives.
- We use vegetarian base in our vegetarian dishes, not chicken or fish stock.
- All our food is prepared in 100% pure, cholesterol free, zero trans-fat vegetable oil.
- We constantly think of our impact on the environment, we even use take-out bags that are made from recycled materials.
